TAXATION OF CAPITAL INVESTED IN UNITED STATES BONDS .- The question whether a corporation (an insurance company) was taxable by the State of New York upon a portion of its capital New York upon a portion of its capital atock invested is United States bonds was before the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of The Home Insurance Company, of New York vs. The People of the State of New York. During the year 1881, it appears, the company had a large part of its capital stock invested in bonds of the United States. It claimed that for that year it was taxable only upon the p-rition of its capital not so invested. The State, on the other hand, maintained that the company was taxable upon the basis of its entire capital. The latter view was that taken by the New York State Court, and this judgment stood as the judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States, the members of the court, in the absence of Mr. Justice Woods, being equally divided upon the question.

Where one member of a firm gave to a bank his individual note for $2 500, indorsing it with the firm name, and thereafter paid $1,500, and twice renewed the note for $1,000 in his own name and without the endorsement of the firm, the Supreme Court of Georgia held (Davenport et al. vs. Lowrey et al., that equity would not thereafter aid the creditor, either by reinstating the original note, with a credit thereon, or by reforming the note last given by having it indorsed by the firm. The court said that reasonable diligence by the bankers or their agent, who twice took a renewal of the note, would have discovered the truth, and equity will not relieve them from the results of their own laches. dorsing it with the firm name, and

Subscride for The Herald. The People's Paper

From a somewhat extended visit to the Country, where he has staked off some possessions, and feels the usual confidence of the miner that he has "a good thing." In conversation with a Hinge proporter yesterday, he as did there were now about 5,000 men in the Country. The character of the mining is galena, gold quarts and placers, the galena ores, by reason of the heavy bodies, and the first-class concentrating mills at work, being the most valuable. Mr. Martin thinks it a big country. Claims only fifteen months old, he say, are now worth half a million dollars. Shimments are made to Comaha, Portland, San Francisco and Weeks, Montan. There are quity a stumber of capitalists looking through the Country.
